CONFIDENTIAL " UNDER PROTECTIVE ORDER

I, Colin B. Weir, declare as follows:

I am President at Economics and Technology, Inc. ("ETI"), 100 Franklin Street, 6th Floor, Boston, Massachusetts 02110. ETI is a research and consulting firm specializing in economics, statistics, regulation and public policy.

I. QUALIFICATIONS, BACKGROUND, AND EXPERIENCE

1. I hold a Masters of Business Administration, with honors, from the High Technology program at Northeastern University, Boston, Massachusetts. I hold a Bachelor of Arts degree cum laude in Business Economics from The College of Wooster, Wooster, Ohio. I have provided expert testimony before federal and state courts, the Federal Communications Commission, and state regulatory commissions, and have contributed research and analysis to numerous ETI publications and expert testimony at the state, federal, and international levels. I have consulted on a variety of consumer and wholesale products cases, calculating damages relating to food products, health/beauty care products, automobiles, household appliances, herbal remedies, electronics, and computers. My Statement of Qualifications, which outlines my professional experience, publications, and record of expert testimony during the last four years, is attached hereto as Exhibit 1. This includes a list of all cases in which, during the previous four years, I have testified as an expert at trial or by deposition.

2. I have participated in the design, execution and/or determination of the economic suitability of conjoint surveys, or have been found by the court to have expertise in conjoint analysis in numerous litigations. These cases include, but are not limited to, These cases include, but are not limited to, Hadley vs. Kellogg; Krommenhock v. Post; Fitzhenry-Russell v. Dr. Pepper; Jones v. Nutiva; Hunter v. Nature's Way; Looper v. FCA; Sanchez-Knutson v. Ford Motor Company; Belfiore v. Procter and Gamble; Kurtz v. Kimberly Clark; In re Scotts EZ Seed

Litigation; In re: ConAgra Foods; In re: Arris Cable Modem; Martinelli v. Johnson & Johnson; Hudock v. LG; Koenig v. Vizio; Banh v. American Honda; and Lessin v Ford.

3. I received graduate level training in conjoint analysis as part of my MBA. I take continuing education in advanced conjoint design, execution, and analysis through Sawtooth Software, a leading provider of conjoint analysis software. In addition, I have more than 17 years of experience using conjoint analysis professionally.

II. ENGAGEMENT

4. I provide this declaration in connection with the case filed by Peter Landsheft et al. ("Plaintiffs") in the above-captioned action against Defendant Apple, Inc. (the "Defendant," or the "Company," or "Apple").¹ I make this declaration based upon my own personal knowledge and, if called as a witness in this action, I would be able to competently testify as to the facts and opinions set forth herein.

5. I have been advised by Counsel for Plaintiffs that Plaintiffs purchased certain Apple products² (the "Products") that were alleged to have been falsely advertised to come enabled with certain enhanced Siri features (the "AI Claim" or the "Claim"),³ and that Plaintiffs claim that "they would not have purchased iPhone 16s . . . or would have paid less for them" had they know that there would be delays in launching the enhanced Siri features.⁴

6. Plaintiffs allege that as a result, Defendant was allowed to charge a premium for the Products with the AI Claim. Plaintiffs further allege, that consumers would not have purchased the Products, or at least not at the premium price, had the Defendant's advertisement been honest.⁵

² Products include the Apple iPhone models 16, 16e, 16 Plus, 16 Pro, 16 Pro Max, 15 Pro Max, and 15 Pro. See, Settlement Agreement, Sec. I.(11).

7. I have been asked by Counsel for Plaintiff to ascertain whether it would be possible to determine materiality and damages arising from Plaintiffs' theory of liability on a class-wide basis using common evidence, and if so, to provide a framework for the calculation of damages suffered by the proposed class of consumers as a result of the use of the Claim.

8. As part of my work on damages, I have been asked to work with Mr. Steven Gaskin to help design (from an economic perspective), and to evaluate the economic suitability of a conjoint survey (as set forth by Mr. Gaskin) to measure the overpayment for the Products solely attributable to the Claim.

9. ETI is being compensated at the rate of $1,000 per hour for my work on this case. The opinions expressed in this declaration are my own, and my compensation is not dependent upon the substance of these opinions or the outcome of the litigation.

10. The documents, data and other materials that I relied upon in forming my opinions are identified throughout my report, and in Exhibit 2, attached hereto. In addition, I have relied upon my educational background and more than 22 years of experience.

III. FRAMEWORK FOR DAMAGES

11. As a threshold matter, it is my opinion that it is possible to determine class-wide damages in this case using Defendant's own available business records, third-party records, industry resources, and the conjoint analysis that has been designed by Mr. Gaskin.

12. As set forth below, I have used the results of a conjoint analysis to calculate any Overpayment Damages (wherein consumers would receive back a portion of the price they paid that reflects the reduction in value of the Products solely attributable to the AI Claim).

13. This methodology can determine the damages across any prescribed time period, and across geographic regions, given any of the possible liability scenarios that may arise in this litigation.

Product Differentiation

14. A price premium as alleged in this case may arise due to the concept of product differentiation. In economics, the concept of product differentiation can be summarized as the introduction of product attributes that allows the consumer to differentiate between otherwise similar products, with the goal of increasing sales and profits.⁶

15. Defendants appear to understand the concept of product differentiation, and identifies generative AI as an opportunity for the Company. In May 2024, prior to Defendant's June 2024 announcement that introduced "Apple Intelligence,"⁷ Tim Cook acknowledged that the Company sees "generative AI as a very key opportunity across our products, and we believe we have advantages that set us apart."⁸

16. With the launch of "Apple Intelligence," Defendant claimed that new generative AI features and capabilities, including Siri enhancements, would be available beginning with the upcoming release of iOS 18.⁹

Prior to the release, claims of the enhanced AI features were advertised and marketed by Defendant. For example, as depicted in Figure 1, Defendant claimed that Siri would be able to take "hundreds of new action in and across apps."¹⁰

With Apple Intelligence, Siri will be able to take hundreds of new actions in and across Apple and third-party apps. For example, a user could say, "Bring up that article about cicadas from my Reading List," or "Send the photos from the barbecue on Saturday to Malia," and Siri will take care of it.

Siri can now take hundreds of new actions in and across apps, including finding book recommendations sent by a friend in Messages and Mail.

17. Defendant continued advertising Apple Intelligence and its promised features right through the launch of the iPhone 16. For example, a three-part video campaign released by Defendant in September 2024 with the launch of iPhone 16, highlights the use of AI enhanced features that quickly recalled a user's previous encounter the previous month, summarized unread emails and created photo montage with music, with only a single prompt.¹¹

¹⁰ See, e.g., supra, footnote 7.

18. The AI Claim at issue in this case would qualify as a differentiating factor, with a potential impact to be tested empirically as discussed below.

IV. CALCULATION OF OVERPAYMENT

DAMAGES: CONJOINT ANALYSIS

19. In this litigation, damages for the Class can be measured as the price premium paid for the Products, if any, solely attributable to the AI Claim.

20. Conjoint analysis is a representative survey technique that permits an economist to analyze the value of various product attributes.¹² Conjoint analysis can be used to determine market valuation/attribute information for a given product or attribute. Conjoint analysis is founded on rigorous statistical and economic principles, and has uses beyond traditional marketing programs.¹³ Indeed, conjoint analysis has been used in litigation contexts to calculate damages for years.¹⁴

21. It is well known that conjoint analysis has a long history of use in the consumer goods industries.¹⁵

22. In a typical conjoint analysis, survey panelists are confronted with various choices of product attributes, prices, and other alternatives, and asked either to rank their preferences, or to choose the most preferred attribute or combination thereof.

23. Through conjoint analysis, by systematically varying the attributes of the product and observing how respondents react to the resulting product profiles, one can statistically deduce information about the individual attributes. In particular, statistical methods (including regression analysis) are often applied to the survey responses to calculate attribute value.¹⁶

24. Conjoint analysis has a long history of use in industry,¹⁷ and is widely accepted and relied upon by enterprises such as Procter & Gamble, Microsoft, General Motors, Ford, and

Google.¹⁸ Conjoint is also widely respected by academics and is a regular part of the curriculum at universities world-wide, such as Duke, Ohio State, Northeastern, University of South Australia, NYU, and University of California.

25. Conjoint analysis can, and indeed has, been used to analyze the value and importance of product claims, such as the Claim. One recent study used conjoint analysis to determine "whether health claims (claims of health-promoting effects) of food products positively influence product price and consumer choices."¹⁹ Prior to conducting the conjoint survey, the study finds that "[i]n general, consumers consider health and wholesomeness as important aspects of food quality."²⁰ The study then uses choice-based conjoint analysis to measure the effects of various product attributes on the price of a single product, green tea. The study examines only four product attributes: health claim, country of origin, the size of the product, and price. The study finds that the health claim on green tea is a positive, statistically significant purchase driver, and results in a price premium of approximately 20%.

26. In light of proposed FDA standardized front-of-pack nutrition labeling standards, another study sought "to estimate the relative contribution of declared amounts of different nutrients to the perception of the overall 'healthfulness' of foods by the consumer."²¹ The study determined that claims such as "this product has no saturated fat," "this product is fat free," and "this product is low in total fat" were among the 22 most important nutrient content claims.²² The study concludes that "Conjoint analysis can lead to a better understanding of how consumers process information about the full nutrition profile of a product, and is a powerful tool for the testing of nutrient content claims."²³

27. An application of conjoint analysis to orange juice was used to evaluate which attributes of orange juice consumers value most. Results of the study showed that vitamin C content was the most important purchase driver besides price.²⁴

28. The use of conjoint analysis in similar applications is too extensive to document exhaustively here.

29. Conjoint analysis, as a survey tool, does not rely on an existing data set for its analysis because it relies on data generated through the survey process. Common conjoint analysis software permits the administration of a representative sample survey, and the analysis of the results therefrom.

30. No individualized analyses, or Class-member-specific inquiry is required. All relevant data needed to complete the conjoint analysis is class-wide, common evidence.

Change in Market Value: The Gaskin Conjoint Survey

31. I have been provided with, and have reviewed, the Export Report of Steven P. Gaskin for Settlement Purposes.²⁵ He has worked in the field of market research and marketing science models since 1982. Mr. Gaskin is an award-winning, published, practitioner of conjoint analysis. I understand that Mr. Gaskin has been asked to describe and design a market research survey and analysis that assesses the price premium for the Products resulting from the Claim at the time and point of purchase.

32. The Gaskin Report describes how conjoint analysis has been used to determine the price premium value at the point of purchase resulting from the Claim.

33. I worked with Mr. Gaskin to develop parts of his conjoint survey in this matter.

34. Mr. Gaskin has designed a conjoint analysis that measures the price premium (in percentage terms) at the time and point of sale solely attributable to the Claim through the use of a Siri (Voice Activated Assistant) attribute²⁶ and price²⁷ along with several distractor attributes.

35. Mr. Gaskin's survey includes market-based price points derived, at least in part, from Defendant's website, other competitor websites, which I have also reviewed.²⁸

36. Mr. Gaskin also considered information specific to the Products when selecting the other attributes and levels for inclusion in the conjoint.²⁹

37. Mr. Gaskin has also taken into account the fact that the number of Products sold during the class period is a known fact, and is fixed as a matter of history.³⁰

38. Mr. Gaskin's Siri (Voice-Activated Assistant) attribute draws its levels from the Complaint, discussions with counsel, Defendant documents, and from an understanding of Plaintiff's stated theory of liability.³¹

39. After the completion of the conjoint survey, the partworths are calculated using Hierarchical Bayes regression.³² The use of Hierarchical Bayes regression provides for, among other factors, the ability to estimate better market-level results from a conjoint survey.

40. After reviewing the Gaskin Report, the methodology underlying Mr. Gaskin's conjoint survey, and the documentary evidence relied upon by Mr. Gaskin and incorporated into the survey design, it is my opinion that Mr. Gaskin's conjoint survey is properly designed to measure the price premium for the Products at the time and point of sale as a result of the Claim. The survey is especially economically suitable given Mr. Gaskin's use of market based prices, and considerations given as to the fixed quantity of Products sold that are part of the Class definition.

V. SUPPLY SIDE CONSIDERATIONS

41. I understand that Mr. Gaskin has considered and accounted for supply side factors in his conjoint design.³³

42. I have also considered supply side factors in my damages framework. First, unlike in a Lanham Act or intellectual property litigation where a but-for quantity of sales may need to be determined, in this litigation, the historic number of units sold is a fact (as I have discussed above). It would be antithetical to the reality of the actual Class purchases to suggest that the quantity supplied be anything other than the actual number of units sold by Defendant and purchased by Class members.

43. Moreover, it is the retailers and not the Defendant that sets the price for the Class Products. The retailers set the price in a competitive environment.

44. Furthermore, if one were to assume, arguendo, that Defendant did set prices and would not have lowered the price in concert with demand (indicating that Defendant priced above the market clearing price), then the economic outcome would be that many or all of the purchases would not have taken place at all. As such, the price premium calculated by Mr. Gaskin will be an inherently conservative measure.

³³ See, e.g., id., at paras 22, 23, 26, 29, 44.

Settlement Declaration of Colin B. Weir

May 5, 2026

45. I worked closely with Mr. Gaskin to ensure that his survey is appropriately designed to measure the true price premium paid at the point of purchase solely attributable to the Claim.

46. Mr. Gaskin and I had several discussions concerning the design of his survey where I provided input based upon economic concepts, and sales and market data. We also had several discussions concerning how the results of his survey would be calculated, and how they would be interpreted and applied.

47. One of the most important and most frequent topics of discussion between myself and Mr. Gaskin is the data on actual sales of the Products in the real-world marketplace. These real-world transactions occurred at prices that already reflect the supply side factors then extant in the marketplace. I understand that Mr. Gaskin relied upon these historical data in setting the prices used in his conjoint survey.

48. Another important supply-side factor that Mr. Gaskin and I considered and discussed was the fact that the quantity of the Products supplied is fixed as a matter of history, which Mr. Gaskin accounts for in his market simulations.

49. Similarly, another important supply-side factor that Mr. Gaskin and I discussed was that, as I discuss below, the market for the Products is an "ordinary" and mature market, subject to competitive pressures that retailers identified as risks to their business. The market for Cell Phones has been in operation for decades.

50. Defendant recently shared with investors the risks they face in the market:

The markets for the Company's products and services are highly competitive and are characterized by aggressive price competition, downward pressure on gross margins, continual improvement in product performance, and price sensitivity on the part of consumers and businesses. The markets in which the Company competes are further defined by frequent introduction of new products and services, short product life cycles, evolving industry standards, and rapid adoption of technological advancements by competitors. Many of the Company's competitors seek to compete primarily through aggressive pricing and very low cost structures, and by imitating the Company's products and infringing on its intellectual property.

Settlement Declaration of Colin B. Weir

The Company's ability to compete successfully depends heavily on ensuring the continuing and timely introduction of innovative new products, services and technologies to the marketplace. The Company designs and develops nearly the entire solution for its products, including the hardware, operating system, numerous software applications and related services. Principal competitive factors important to the Company include price, product and service features (including security features), relative price and performance, product and service quality and reliability, design and technology innovation, a strong third-party software and accessories ecosystem, marketing and distribution capability, service and support, corporate reputation, and the ability to effectively protect and enforce the Company's intellectual property rights.³⁴

51. Defendant's competitors are experiencing the same competitive pressures. Google, developer of the Gemini AI model, reports to investors the it faces "competition in every aspect" of business, including but not limited to:

- general purpose search engines and information services;
- vertical search engines and e-commerce providers for queries on topics such as those related to travel, jobs, and health, which users may navigate directly to rather than go through Google;
- online advertising platforms and networks, including online shopping and streaming services;
- other forms of advertising, such as billboards, magazines, newspapers, radio, and television, as our advertisers typically advertise in multiple media, both online and offline;
- digital content and application platform providers;
- providers of enterprise cloud services;
- AI model developers and providers of AI products and services;
- companies that design, manufacture, and market consumer hardware products, including businesses that have developed proprietary platforms;
- providers of digital video services;

- social networks, which users may rely on for product or service referrals, rather than seeking information through traditional search engines; and providers of workspace communication and connectivity products.³⁵

52. Many major retailers identify strong competition relating to price. Best Buy, a retailer that sells Apple products, recently advised its investors that:

While we constantly strive to offer consumers the best value, the retail sector is highly competitive. Price is of great importance to most customers, and price transparency and comparability continues to increase. Digital technology enables consumers to compare prices on a real-time basis, putting additional pressure on us to maintain competitive prices. We compete against many local, regional, national and international retailers (both online and brick and mortar), as well as against some of our vendors and mobile network carriers that market their products directly to consumers. Competition is becoming increasingly diverse, including in the advertising revenue space and with the proliferation of marketplace platforms offering products at increasingly lower prices. Diverse competition may also arise from new entrants into the markets we serve, including unexpected players who could more aggressively leverage technologies such as AI and platform integrations.³⁶

53. Other large retailers have also noted the intense level of competition in the industry, as well as the importance of responding to consumers on their ability to earn profits. Walmart, Inc. notes the high level of competition that it faces from other retailers:

Each of our segments competes for customers, employees, digital prominence, products and services and in other important aspects of its business with many other local, regional, national and global physical, eCommerce and omni-channel retailers, social commerce platforms, wholesale club operators and retail intermediaries, as well as companies that offer services in digital advertising, data analytics/insights, fulfillment and delivery services, health and wellness and financial services. The omni-channel retail landscape is highly competitive and rapidly evolving, and the entry of new, well-funded competitors may increase competitive pressures.

We compete in a variety of ways, including the prices at which we sell our merchandise, merchandise selection and availability, services offered to customers, location, store hours, in-store amenities, the shopping convenience and overall shopping experience we offer, the attractiveness and ease of use of our digital platforms, quality and accessibility of data for customers, suppliers, and associates, and cost, speed of and options for accurate delivery to customers of merchandise purchased through our digital platforms or through our omni-channel integration of our physical and digital operations..³⁷

54. Amazon recently advised its investors that:

We Face Intense Competition: Our businesses are rapidly evolving and intensely competitive.

We serve consumers through our online and physical stores and focus on selection, price, and convenience.

We seek to offer our customers low prices, fast and free delivery, easy-to-use functionality, and timely customer service..³⁸

55. Cell Phones are sold by many retailers. The market for Cell Phones is not price regulated. The market for the Class Products is not restricted.

56. Pricing in the Cell Phone market operates as in an ordinary market: prices are established in the marketplace, and consumers can choose to buy at the prices set in the market or not; there are no insurance intermediaries, co-payments, or other such complexities.

VI. CONJOINT OVERPAYMENT PERCENTAGE

57. The Gaskin Report sets forth the manner in which the conjoint analysis has been performed and the manner in which the results of the conjoint analysis will be calculated.

Gaskin has determined that there is a price premium due solely to the use of the Claim.

Specifically, Gaskin states that:

- [T]he Price Premium due to a change from an iPhone that 'Includes Basic Siri' to an iPhone that 'Includes an AI Enhanced Siri' is 5.5%.³⁹

58. Mr. Gaskin has affirmed that this factor is "applicable across all Class Devices."⁴⁰

VII. TOTAL SALES OF THE PRODUCTS

59. I have been provided with unit sales of the Products by Defendant. This data contains unit sales on a product-by-product basis, on a quarterly basis, beginning July 1, 2024 and ending June 30, 2025.⁴¹ I have also been provided with Defendant's price lists that were dated between June 26, 2024 and March 23, 2025,⁴² as well as Defendant's share of unit sales by storage capacity, from the fourth quarter 2024 through the third quarter 2025.⁴³

60. I understand the relevant class period to be June 10, 2024 through March 29, 2025.

61. I have summarized my analysis of Defendant's sales data in Table 1 below. For purposes of this analysis, I have utilized Defendant's unit sales records, price lists and the estimated share of units associated with each level of storage capacity, to estimate total sales for each phone during the class period.

IPHONE 16
IPHONE 15 PRO MAX
IPHONE 15 PRO
Total	37,078,131	$41,164,814,198

62. Based on the unit sales data and price lists provided by Defendant for each iPhone category, I have calculated total unit sales during the relevant class period to be 37,078,131, and total dollar sales during the relevant class period to be $41,164,824,298.

63. I understand that discovery is ongoing and that my analysis and opinions are being presented for purposes of settlement. I may supplement my report based upon additional information learned in discovery. I may provide additional opinions at the certification stage. I therefore reserve the right to supplement, amend or modify my testimony.

VIII. CALCULATION OF DAMAGES

64. This litigation calls for the following damages calculations:

- Price Premium Damages -- wherein consumers would receive the difference in the economic value of the Products at the time and point of sale with the AI Claim compared to the value of an otherwise identical unit of the Product without the AI Claim.

Settlement Declaration of Colin B. Weir

Price Premium Damages

65. After completing all of the work as discussed above, the final calculation of total price premium damages in this litigation will be calculated as follows:

$$\begin{aligned} & \textit{Total Sales of the Products} \\ & \times \textit{Price Premium \%} \\ & = \textit{Price Premium Damages} \end{aligned}$$

The Price Premium Damages calculation may be calculated with mathematical equivalency⁴⁴ as:

$$\begin{aligned} & \textit{Average Purchase Price per Product} \\ & \times \textit{Price Premium \%} \\ & \times \textit{Number of Products Sold} \\ & = \textit{Price Premium Damages} \end{aligned}$$

66. This method will be used to calculate damages to the Class in the aggregate, using the same common formula (as above) and the results of the Gaskin survey. No individualized inquiry will be required.

IX. CALCULATION OF PRICE PREMIUM BASED ON CURRENT DATA

67. With the data presently available to me for each iPhone category, I have calculated Price Premium Damages using the Gaskin Conjoint Price Premium Percentage of 5.5%. These calculations are shown below in Table 2.

⁴⁴ The total sales of the Products are of course equal to the product of the average price and the number of Products sold.

IPHONE 15 PRO MAX		5.5%
IPHONE 15 PRO		5.5%
Total	$41,164,814,198		$2,264,064,781

68. Total Price Premium Damages during the relevant class period are $2,264,064,781.

69. Based upon the estimated number of units sold of 37,078,131, average price premium damages would be approximately $61.06 per phone.
